We speak about wanting and needing transparency in our slave in order to succeed in our dynamic. We feel driven to be omnipotent, omniscient, and all-powerful. The idea of making mistakes, being flawed, imperfect in any way is anathema. We speak of slaves being brave enough to open themselves to our scrutiny, to show us their "ugly parts." How can we truly have an authority-transfer environment where they entrust all of themselves to us when we never really show them who we are? How long can we pretend to be "perfect?" Becoming a fully-faceted self-actualized individual requires having integrity. Integrity is defined as "knowing and accepting one's self."
